AUTHOR'S NOTE

The rāgās of which notations appear in this book conform to the Benares Musical Tradition. They have been noted as played on the Sarasvatī Vīṇā by Śhrī Śhivendranāth Basu of Benares and with his kind help and advice. Though they often slightly differ from those noted by Bhātkhaṇḍe and other modern compilers this does not mean that any of these authorities is mistaken but that some variations in form and name have gradually appeared in the rāgās as taught in the different parts of India.

The rāgā-poems marked with a five-pointed star were translated in collaboration with the late Lewis Thompson.

INTRODUCTION

THE MODES OR RĀGĀS

EACH rāgā or mode of Indian Music is a set of given sounds called notes (svarā-s) forming with a permanent tonic certain ratios. To each of these ratios is said to correspond a definite idea or emotion. The complex mood created by the mixture and contrast of these different ideas or emotions is the mood or expression of the rāgā. The harmonious relations which exist between the notes and which can be represented by numerical ratios do not exclusively belong to music. The very same relations can be found in the harmony which binds together all the aspects of manifestation. These ratios can express the change of the seasons and that of the hours, the symphony of colours as well as that of forms. Hence the mood of a rāgā can be accurately represented by a picture or a poem which only creates an equivalent harmony through another medium.

The expression of the Rāgās

The expression of a rāgā is thus determined by its scale. It results from the expressions of each of the intervals (śhrutis) which the different notes form with the tonic.

The ascending scale in a rāgā often slightly differs from the scale descending. In some rāgās are found additional accidental notes used only in the particular context of definite melodic variations. Thus the mode Pilū offers no less than twelve notes, though most of them are limited in their use to particular ornaments. The use of these accidental notes allows the bringing out of subtle shades of colouring within a mood. For example, a major second (Ri śhuddhā) always expresses strength and self-assertion. Used only in appoggiatura, it will give a faint idea of self-assertion, at once melting away. Thus it may express a vacillating resolve. Similarly a nuance of sadness, or of love, can be brought out by careful and impermanent use of the intervals that corresponds with these emotions.

[INTRODUCTION

Correspondences

Since there are only five intervals (śhrutis) of each type (Jāti), which may be used in music, a few pentatonic modes can alone express pure, unvariegated moods. Because of their forceful character, these pentatonic scales were known to ancient music as the male rāgās.

By adding further notes to the male rāgās, various hexatonic and heptatonic scales can be formed which, since some of their intervals must necessarily belong to different types of expression, will show more contrast or indecision, and so, in a way, more delicacy and subtlety. Such scales are known as the rāgiṇīs, the feminine counterparts or consorts of the male modes. Thus every rāgā whose śhrutis belong to a single group will tend to be represented in picture or poem by a god or a man, a rāgā of mixed śhruti-jātis by a goddess or a woman.

This rule, which corresponds to a fundamental classification in the ancient system of Nandikeśhvarā, lost much of its rigidity when the three main original systems of Indian music began to get mixed up, especially when, during Moghul times, the great musicians lost all contact with the Sanskrit theoretical books. This is why in modern music we come to see that the ancient basic enharmonic mode which was known as Bhairavā is now called Guṇākalī and is considered a rāgiṇī while the modern Bhairavā is a seven-notes scale. It should, however, be remembered that these changes are merely matters of names and classification and do not affect the modes as such or the music in general.

The Rāgā-poems

Poems describing the mood of the rāgā are found in a number of Sanskrit works on music. References to them in other works seem to show that many of them were originally part of a treatise (now believed lost) by Kohalā, one of the earliest writers on music. The two best collections of poems available in print are found in the Chatvārimśāch'hatārāgā-nirūpanam attributed (some think wrongly) to Nāradā and in the Sanḡitā-Darpaṇā of Dāmodarā Miśhrā. Many of the poems are common to both. There are, however, many unpublished works, some of which are very ancient, which give numerous poems and definitions of the scales in the different schools, important ones being the Rāgā Ratnākarā of Gandharvā Rājā (a work belonging probably to the medieval period) and the Rāgā Sāgarā.

INTRODUCTION]

The Chatvārimśāch'hatārāgānirūpaṇam has been variously dated from several centuries B.C. to the fourteenth century A.D. Many of its verses are found in the thirteenth-century Saṅgītā Ratnākarā, and most of its rāgā-poems are reproduced in the early eighteenth-century encyclopaedia, the Śhivātattvā Ratnākarā which quotes only Śhaivā works. The Saṅgītā Darpaṇā, which is partly a compilation, is a work of the early seventeenth century. The nineteenth-century Bengali work Rāgā Kalpā drumā, also reproduces further poems whose sources have not so far been ascertained.

It is not easy to determine which scale corresponds with a given poem or picture, for the names of the ancient rāgās are now often attributed to scales which have changed. And, again, a rāgā of Southern India may, nowadays, differ considerably from one called by the same name in Northern India.

For the present we shall take it that the ancient poems refer in most cases to the rāgās as they are known to-day.

In the rarely used ┐ and ┑ the sides remain open for crotchet and quaver and are closed for minim and semi-breve ┑ ┑.

Remarks on the Notation

1. In the staff notation accidental flats or sharps remain in effect for a whole measure bar, as is usual, even if their interval, their 'śhruti' is altered.

For example in:

the second lowered D is also flat.

2. The bar divisions indicated are meant only for the facility of reading. They do not correspond to rhythm-units (tālā) since in the Ālāpā, the first exposition of the theme, alone given here, there can be no complex rhythm but mere time-units (mātrās).

Examples

1. The examples of expressive motives given with each rāgā are those eventually explained by our teacher; they are, of course, by no means exhaustive.

2. Examples of short variations will be found in the following rāgās: Śhrī, Bhīmāpalāśhrī, Bhūpālī, Jayājavanti, Mālakośhā.

ANTARĀ

A musical score for the song 'The Rose Tree'. It consists of three staves. The first staff is the melody, written in treble clef with a key signature of one sharp (F#) and a common time signature (C). The second staff is a harmonic accompaniment, also in treble clef, featuring chords and moving lines. The third staff is a bass line, written in bass clef, providing a steady accompaniment. The music is characterized by its simplicity and the use of a single sharp, giving it a folk-like quality. The lyrics 'The Rose Tree' are written below the first staff, and the lyrics 'The Rose Tree' are written below the second staff. The lyrics 'The Rose Tree' are written below the third staff.

SCALE TYPE: Chromatic in the lower tetrachord and usually chromatic in the upper one, which only accidentally becomes Enharmonic (B++; Ni++)

CHARACTERISTICS: No G (no Pa). Resembles Gurjārī but with F♯-- (Ma t--). [(Under the name of Vilāsākhānī Bhātkhaṇḍe gives another rāgā with B♭ (Ni komal) and G (Pa)]]

EXPRESSION:

The absence of G (Pa) creates an impression of great sorrow, that of an irreparable loss mourned. Very sorrowful, intense grief and misery (like the death of a very dear friend)

There is no trace of harshness nor selfishness

F#-- (Ma T--) gives sadness, which without G (Pa), in the melancholy surroundings of ToḢi, brings out the burning intensity of grief (while F natural (Ma śhuddhā) in Gurjārī expresses quiet and peaceful resignation). G (Pa) in ToḢi, brings forth a radiant sunshine in which sorrows are dissolved

The very sharp B++ (Ni++) further intensifies the sadness

The musical score for "The Rose Tree" is written on a grand staff (treble and bass clefs). The melody is in G major, indicated by one sharp (F#). The piece consists of three lines of music. CHARACTERISTICS: resembles Gāndhārī or Yāvanāpūrī but with B♭ (Ri k.)

EXPRESSION:

Renunciation, grave and dignified. Ascent always by thirds.

Similar to Gāndhārī but more pathetic because of D flat (Ri komal) which makes it more feminine and deeper than Yāvanāpūrī, it introduces melancholy but also wisdom and soberness. (The D natural (Ri śuddhā) of Yāvanāpūrī is manly, commanding, childish, stubborn.) Much use of A flat (Dha komal) makes this rāgā very expressive and tender.

MODE TYPE (Thāṭ): Khammājā

SCALE TYPE: Diatonic

CHARACTERISTICS: use of B♭ (Ni k.) as an ornament from G(Pa) and rarely of an accidental F♯ (Ma t.) as an ornament of G (Pa). [According to Bhātkhaṇḍe, Dha(A) and Ga(E) are the Vādī and Samvādī] pleasing, lovely. B♭ (Ni k.) is tender and submissive, gently praying with folded hands. In relation with D(Ri), the samvādī, F-(Ma-) forms a minor third and thus has a melancholy expression.

EXPRESSION:

SCALE TYPE: Diatonic

CHARACTERISTICS: similar to Bihāg (a midnight rāg). In all Sāraṅgās, D, F and G (Ri Ma and Pa) are predominant, this is a characteristic of midday.

EXPRESSION: contentment, faith, very tender and loving prayer, more restful, lovely, peaceful and contented than other Sāraṅgās.

The two F(2 Ma) (natural and sharp) represent midday (or midnight).

E₊ (Ga₊) denotes satisfaction, contentment, faith; E (Ga) relief, consolation.

X. PILŪ

GROUP: Pilū.

TUNING OF INSTRUMENT:

CLASS (Jāti): Sampūrṇā (heptatonic)

SONANT (Vādī): E♭ (Ga k.)

CONSONANT (Samvādī): B₊ (Ni₊)

TIME OF PLAY: fourth quarter of the day (late afternoon before sunset)

MODE TYPE (Tḥāṭ): Pilū

SCALE TYPE: the twelve chromatic notes. The regular descent is equivalent to the Western minor mode.

CHARACTERISTICS: Pilū uses all the chromatic notes. F♯ (Ma t.) is only used as an ornament of G (Pa). In ascent for each note, the inferior half tone should be used as ornament, in descent the superior half tone.

EXPRESSION: she does not know herself what she wants, she is satisfied yet longing for something else, sometimes gay and sometimes sad, ever changing.

E(Ga) is never flat (komal) in late night rāgās.

(Kalingaḍā, the rāgā of morning twilight, is considered a son of Dipakā, the rāgā of evening twilight.)
